

Spasm

Meshuggah

Stroboscopic contortion, assault
Light bulb language translated into fits
Codes of tendon flickers I can't grasp
Focus lost as I writhe and twitch Random beats of blinding shock waves
Erratic suns that twist my eyes
Flashes pounding at my thoughts
As the intrinsic pains multiply Muscle and tissue twined with every violent lash
Battered by an unrelenting shine
Immobilized by the increasing pains
The procreating agonies of system breakdown Light wave frequency, body oscillation
Undeciphered motions pass through my flesh
Bodily reverberation induced
A corporeal system lost in its waves Bleached into their existence
By tremulous epileptic strokes
Blasts of irregular pulsar radiation
Triggering the process of mind and body control Lost to their control
A sentence, in flashes told
Enticed by their calls
Insane, divine Torn, undone, dissolved
By incandescent gods condemned
Burned their mark on my soul
To my inverted shadow confined Twisted, spun vertebrae
And spinal column unaligned
Joints shattered and torn apart
Spasm rendered distortion Organic spiral stretched
And torn into a new creation
A world less thing, a thing less world
Light born malformation
