Idiot

Bram Stoker

A comet's tail, a hairy star
You swimming to an island peeking through the sea
On a quiet night, you left your devoted husband and ran around like you was young again
But the devil don't care what you do
The only one who cares is you
From a cirrus cloud You got so far away and how could you have expected me to see you?
The sun will go down and as surely as the day ends you will lose control again

But the devil don't care what you do
The only one who cares is you
Damnable
My impatience is unforgivable You better escape while you can but uncertainty it has tied you to this rock Now the needle draws no blood
But the devil don't care what you do
The only one who cares is you
