

Aging Astronauts

Helium

I count the stars almost every day
The aging astronauts have floated away, oh
I watch the future from the edge of the night
The same stars that killed you will bring you light
Will you go on without your friends
There's a time for everything except the end
The same picture hasn't got the same past
You've seen the good times, baby can you make them last
I ride a plane almost every day
I've seen the freaks lost in the milky way
Will we go on until the end
I know it's coming but I just don't know when
