Belonging

Loewenhardt

I wanted love so very bad that I could almost tasted it And so I gave mine all to you and hoped you would not wast it I laid awake the whole night long and wondered was I wrong But when you woke and touched my face
I knew that I belongedBelonging to someone I find is very necessary
The load is lighter on your mind when someone helps to carry And even though I'm strong enough to make it on my own I would not even care to try to live my life aloneFor if I lived my life alone with no one to belong to There'd be no one to pledge my heart or sing my song of love to My melodies would soon dry up and the words would leave me too It all would come to pass if I could not belong to youI wanted love so very bad that I could almost taste it
And when I gave mine all to you I knew you would not wast it
