

Like It Like That

Better Than Ezra

Calling from that porch again
Low dress blowing in the wind
I should have known I'd regret it later
But she blow like a Tsunami I like it like that, I like it like that, I like it like that I like it like that, I like it like that, I like it like that Terra Cotta, window pane
Brown skin soaking up the rain
I should have been a cynical writer
But she don't care just where he be I like it like that, I like it like that, I like it like that I like it like that, I like it like that, I like it like that She can move you, she can move you I like it like that, I like it like that, I like it like that I like it like that, I like it like that, I like it like that I like it like that, I like it like that, I like it like that I like it like that, I like it like that, I like it like that
