

Davey

Alanna-Marie Boudreau

Whatâ€™s on your shoulder, Davey?

Making you as cold as ice

Whatâ€™s on your shoulder, Davey?

Making you mistrust your wife

I know that your daddy was a real hard man

And maybe all your angerâ€™s justified

But whatever he did or he didnâ€™t do

Oh, donâ€™t let that define your life

Whatâ€™s on your shoulder, Davey?

Makes you break your hand against the plaster wall

Whatâ€™s on your shoulder, Davey?

Makes you drink so much you cannot think at all

You know that I love you until Kingdom come

You know I accept you as you are

But only you can choose who the victim is

Yeah, and only you can choose to love

Only you can choose to love

Whatâ€™s on your shoulder, Davey?

Makes you walk for lonely hours in the field

Whatâ€™s on your shoulder, Davey?

Makes you struggle to believe that God is real

See, I know that your daddy was a real hard man

And maybe all your angerâ€™s justified

But I wonâ€™t let you sink in hatred â€™till you die

Oh, youâ€™re wasting the best years of our life

Yeah, youâ€™re wasting the best years of our life

Everything thatâ€™s terrible is something that needs love

Anyone whoâ€™s hurt you has been hurt

Nobodyâ€™s as evil as they seem to be

Oh, but hatred surely makes them worse

Yeah, your hatred surely makes him worse.

Whatâ€™s on your shoulder, Davey?

Makes you press your lips against my own

Whatâ€™s on your shoulder, Davey?

Makes you ask me if weâ€™ll ever get back home

I know that your daddy was a real hard man

But you know Iâ€™m beside you as your wife
Baby we are pilgrims to the Promised Land
And someday you will be alright
My Davey, you will be alright
