

After Rain

Dermot Kennedy

I call arrows to fall short.
Because the snow is at our feet.
When embraces subside, and the lilies have died,
It comes down to her tears on a sheet.

But it's alright because,
You cause lanterns to light.
And force demons disperse.
And if Lucifer may fear the swift drying of tears,
Then, for evil, you could not be worse.

But I see you now, I see you.
Release me now, kinda like dreams do.
I see you now, was hard to see you.

Just don't forget to sing.
Remember everything.

You're the only little girl I know who'd bring a kite in the snow.
Said, "you just gonna hold it up?"
You said, "Nah, I'm gonna let it go".
When your heart hurts,
Days like today are the antidote.
If you think just maybe it's her,
Then promise me, young man, you're gonna let her know.

You won't go lonely, yeah.
(X4)

It'll all be better in the morning.
'Cause while you sleep I'll build a wall.
But pick a weapon up or something.
We're 'bout to have ourselves a brawl.

In dead of night, one window open,
He heard her singing down the hall.
Singing 'bout him, least he was hoping.
She left her listener enthralled.

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnyrics.com/>