The Deepest Ocean There Is

Tired Pony

I've been terrified since you walked out the door
And these were not the lies I told you once before
This is not the end, it's still an outside but I'm not taking off my wedding ring just yetIn its years since I took stock of it
Seems that it's become too much
This is everything I ever wrote
Collapsed into the coreI've been terrified for far too fucking long
What is that thing I lack that makes you so damn strong?
Your letter in my hands is rolled into a ball
With drunken comedy, it's thrown hard at the wallIn its years since I took stock of it
Seems that it's become too much
This is everything I ever wrote
Collapsed into the coreThe stitches are unraveling
And the seams have all but burst
Maybe all my years of traveling
Have quenched of what I've thirstedThese years have flown by These hands have shaken
I have no notion
Of what happens nextThere's a kind of feeling
And I think of it
Then the panic quickens
There is no sorrow
