Broken

Good Riddance

It's been separating in my head
The roads we've traveled down before your crash
And putting all your trash this time it's gone
And nothing stays the same today
You know I've cried for my last time
I've given everything that's mine to give andYou're broken again
And this time I won't catch you falling
I can only do you wrong
It's a bit of insane
My words of comfort are disregarded
And we've known it all along, all alongYou've got a thing for breaking hearts
Another night another fifth of laying blame
But nothing seems to wash away that shame
That kisses all your blackest dreams
You know I've played the game that always tricks you
I'd cut off my right arm to fix you butSo what's so wrong
