

Corinthian

The Bevis Frond

I opened my eyes and reached for the clock that glowed in the dark like a luminous friendAs a regency buck with a three cornered head appeared in my room and stood at the end of my bedAt first I was sure it must be a dream
but after awhile
I knew it was realSo I turned on the light and tried to be brave and the city outside was silent and still as the gravePaler than dawn was my visitor's face and darker than night was the shadow he castSo I rose from my bed and I asked him his name and he suddenly turned and vanished as quick as he came
