

Symphony of the Damned

Morgana Lefay

In nomansland between heaven and hell
 Madness is chanting my name
 Thousand souls erratic in life
Chained in no place berawed their heaven
 Out of tune noises pulsating my mind
 A fatal opera inferno of sounds
 My conscience fading, fading
 Nowhere in time
 Yesterday is tomorrow and today
Shadeless faces souls with no name
 Standing hypnotized going insane
 Hearing helplessly
 Listen...
 To the symphony of the damned
 I search for light that I can't find
I search for shadows in this life behind
 From south of heaven they are calling me
 Through this hysterical psychic custody
 I feel hands of compact nothing
 Tighten its grip on me
 Symphony of the damned
 Corridors blindly, I can see them
Flashing by in the shadows of my conscience
 There is a voice calling for my soul
 In my mind the senses overflowing
 To a peak past of what is human
 As a god I spread my wings I can fly
 I am alive, I got the fire, got the rage
 Like a giant bird of prey, I am the night
 I am the dark, I am the raven, I am the one
 That you would call descended from the sky
 Like tears lost in the rain that music fades...
 I am sweeping over paradise
 Where this god rules in disguise
 Further on to a higher place
 Where I'm promised to be born again
 Like tears lost in the rain that music fades...
 That symphony of the damned
