Remember Who You Are

Stuart Millar

Many of you may have the feeling that you have done this before. You have.
We are seeking to discover the solutions to this grand dilemma.
Yet, great opportunity lies within this state of confusion.
The inner and outer workings are coming together.
Your challenge is to know yourself through your imagination.
And to remember, who you are.

Calling to you yourselves to reconsider all you thought holy.
We ask you to reevaluate the purpose of your life.
To redefine the forces that rule you.
To resurrect the codes of consciousness stored in your being.
It is time for you to reclaim your knowledge as a creator through thought.
To restore beauty through value of life.
And to remember, who you are.

It is time for each of you to be noticed in your own way.
Only then will you benefit others.
You must act and integrate what is awakening within you.
It is time for you to make a commitment.
To create joy, and love for yourself.
And to remember, who you are.

Calling to you yourselves to reconsider all you thought holy.
We ask you to reevaluate the purpose of your life.
To redefine the forces that rule you.
To resurrect the codes of consciousness stored in your being.
It is time for you to reclaim your knowledge as a creator through thought.
To restore beauty through value of life.
And to remember, who you are.
