

Harmless Heart

Trisha Yearwood

You said you were afraid to trust
So sorry for yourself it must be hard living inside your head
And I'm no angel in disguise, I've had my share of alibis
But I was true to you, I meant every word I said But what's the use
You believe whatever you want to You can run, you can hide
Love will still come to find you
You can turn it away
Keep romancing your pain You're the best at self defense
I'd say, "You've mastered the art"
But, baby, mine was a harmless heart In your eyes I'm like the rest
You set me up to fail the test
And prove that you were right
Everyone lets you down The ghost of all that might have been
Is tapping on your shoulder
But you just keep right on moving
You never turn around If you ever do
I hope you see that I really love you You can run, you can hide
Love will still come to find you
You can turn me away
Keep romancing your pain You're the best at self defense
I'd say, "You've mastered the art"
But, baby, mine was a harmless heart You're the best at self defense
I'd say "You've mastered the art"
But, baby, mine was a harmless heart
Yeah, baby, mine was a harmless heart
