String of Blinking Lights

Paper Moon

Bottle of wine that hadn't been opened yet
We forgot about it while you were here
And a string of blinking lights
That can now be put awayAnd it's almost midnight here
We're all about to ring in
A new year, a new yearAnd I won't call you for another hour
One more hour
'Cause it's your time somewhereIt happens all over again
All over again, all over again
All over againJust a couple more days 'til I fly away
From this lovely place, my short lived home
Saying goodbye is much easier now
Looking forward to a bitter coldAnd it's almost time to land
The city's changed as much as a small city can
But change isn't why I'm coming back
It's your familiar life where it happensAll over again
All over againSaying goodbye is so much easier now
Looking forward to a bitter coldAnd it's almost time to land
The city's changed as much as a small city can
But change isn't why I'm coming back
It's your familiar life where it happensAll over again, all over again
All over again, all over again
All over again, all over again
All over again, all over again

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/