

Holloway Girl (1997 Remastered Version)

Marillion

I was out in the cold of a North London street
A cog in the hurrying world
Above the walls and the gate police
I caught a glimpse of a Holloway girl She was reachin' out of a window
From a space just a few inches wide
'Till the hand of justice pulled her back inside One day, freedom will unlock your door
So hold on, believe on
Be who you were before
One day, freedom will unlock your door I know how hard it can be to wait
For proof you were right all along
Self-destruction is easy for you
We know what you're capable of But like a needle in a haystack
The truth gets so disguised
In a kingdom built on madness and on lies One day, freedom will unlock your door
So hold on, believe on
Be who you were before
In deepest darkness, the faintest light looks bright
So hold on, hold on
It's gonna be all right You're lookin' up at a mountain
Between you and the outside
But there isn't a mountain in this whole world
Hasn't been climbed One day, freedom will unlock your door
So hold on, believe on
Be who you were before
In deepest darkness, the faintest light looks bright
So hold on, hold on
It's gonna be all right One day, freedom
One day, freedom will unlock your door
