

Made of Straw

Pree

You spoke it plain and speak it still how once they moved across the sill and left it stripped and fit to crack, but now theyâ€™ve fallen further back

You count yourself a fragile hem to hang until you're taken in or sewn into a feathered throw, forever sleeping, sheet to chin

You can swallow all you need to keep around
They will follow when the sun goes down
You were hollow when they made their rounds and, oh
you were hollow when the sun went down

Set out to drown the weeks, but now theyâ€™re bound to drag their feet, face down and fast asleep, forgotten, how they came to meet

From a curtain made of straw and twine that cut the frosted air, I know exactly what I saw--
I saw what simply wasnâ€™t there

No name for what you want You kept it safe, it kept too long, tripped a vein and stepped upon a worry I had left for gone

You can swallow all you need to keep around
They will follow when the sun goes down
You were hollow when they made their rounds, and oh,
you were hollow when the sun went down
