

Marionette

Soul Asylum

Marionette, I haven't met you yet
I hear you're good, I hear you're made out of wood
Not quite as blind as you might think she'd be [Unverified] they run as deep as a tree And they cut off your wings and replaced them with strings
Now the strings attach to everything
It's twisted and tangled and troubled with anger
But somehow you still swing Tried all my trick, I tried to steal a kiss
Splinters and slivers stuck all over my lips
She thinks she must be doing something wrong
They pull the strings and then they string you along And they cut off your wings and replaced them with strings
Now the strings attach to everything
It's twisted and tangled but I've got an angle
On just what makes you swing, hanging by a string [Unverified]
She is wearing thin She's up to [unverified] sometimes [unverified]
Know the boss he makes her do things his way
So why do you think she's so scared of you
What do you think makes her that way?
When push comes to shove she'll push and shove It doesn't always have to be this way
She's saving up for a vacation somewhere Why do you think she's so scared of you
What do you think makes her that way?
When push comes to shove she'll push and shove
It's very hard work when you don't get paid And they cut off your wings and replaced them with strings

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>