Landscapes

Descending weightless I'm no stranger to the burden of night
A distant view, a far, beyond the loneliness of every time
We sleep paralysed into the twilight hours only for another broken dream of life around the sun
I step through the ages of death rise beyond the gates of fire, into the realms of ghosts from the day I was born I've been waiting to die hung from the neck by the years spent wasted In the wake of the night
I was hypnotised
But in the land of sleep
Delirium encompassed me
My head was inside out Everything was upside down I feel the change in my shadow stretch as the sun, collapse and dies between gravity's grace I'm on my knees with arms spread wide If there is only one way to know for what awaits, beyond this life then I'll trade it all for just a little peace of mind
