The Absence

Blinded behind walls of
Self built stained glass
Focus enters eyes well watered
At last, the eyes with vision splitHewn end to end, life force leaked
From sun-cracked skin
In the blink of an eye, dying too is the quick
This life story to tell with one second to liveThe hammer comes down and thunder strikes
Where we burn fast in the build of our livesSlowing down to see the mountains you built
This life story to tell with one second to live
Slowing down to see the time that passed you by
Your life story to tell with only one second to liveTime takes throne to purge the fill of our flight
When days turn into years and a loss of life
Death rattles a mile away from your restless symphony
The ridden thought unsound
The shadows that crept lonely all aroundThe hammer comes down and thunder strikes
Where we burn fast in the build of our livesNow waiting will just not work
When tales must be told, changed and retoldSlowing down to see the mountains you built
This life story to tell with one second to live
Slowing down to see the time that passed you by
Your life story to tell with only one second to liveHey, hey, hey, hey
Hey, hey, hey, hey
Hey, hey, hey, hey
Hey, hey, hey, heySlowing down to see the mountains you built
This life story to tell with one second to live
Slowing down to see the time that passed you by
Your life story to tell with only one second to liveSlowing down to see the mountains you built
Slowing down, your life story to tell
Slowing down with one second to live
