

Glorious You

Frank Turner

I can see you are hurting, beneath your new red dress Beneath your sharp new shoes and your new tattoos, you are directionless. And I know you've been working, as hard as you can,
to prevent the question, the expectation and I understand. So come on now, if we all pull together, we can lift up the weight of the world from your shoulders,
lift up the weight of the world from your shoulders, just for a minute or two. From the moment your phone alarm cuts the morning in two.

To the moment you close your bedroom door and all that's left of it is you. There were a thousand auditions, you didn't quite get through. So many masks you wear so much weight to bear but you were only ever you You were glorious you, You were glorious. So come on now, if we all pull together, we can lift up the weight of the world from your shoulders,
lift up the weight of the world from your shoulders, just for a minute or two. (x2) You can be glorious you, (x3) With your messed up makeup, your mixed up memphis, glorious you. With your tongue tied tragedies and your too small t-shirt, glorious you. So don't you worry, all things must end. There are sunlit-up lands around the riverbend. So come on now, if we all pull together, we can lift up the weight of the world from your shoulders,

lift up the weight of the world from your shoulders, just for a minute or two. (x2) And be glorious you. You were glorious you.
