Maybe You Should

Taylor Hicks

I look around this room and feel the pull of tender years
Before we knew enough to be afraid of all our fears
Baby there was no corner we couldn't fight our way out of
And every thought of leaving left us leaning on this love
We had it all you know before you started letting go
If you can walk away tonight, give it up for good
Throw it all away like we swore we never would
If you can tear down everything we built, deny everything we felt
I guess there's a lot that I misunderstood
If you can leave here tonight, baby maybe you should
Baby I just keep on seeing all that moonlight shining down
The way our love could light up this little Alabama town
So I keep holding on to hope still finding reasons to believe
'Cause all I ever got from you was always just enough for me
But if it's not for you do what you've got to do
If you can walk away tonight, give it up for good
Throw it all away like we swore we never would
If you can tear down everything we built, deny everything we felt
I guess there's a lot that I misunderstood
If you can leave here tonight, baby maybe you should
If you can leave here tonight, baby maybe you should, maybe you should
