

Dynamite Mine

Murder By Death

In Dynamite Mine your hour will come
In a shower of stones steel beams
They'll push and they'll pull against the rock wall
And find you buried among the debris When they search for you the dogs will sniff him out
From a torn piece of his shirt
They'll bound down the path with lust on their breath
And find you under a patch of fresh dirt Son cover your ears
Lord how the blast will ring
And when that rumbling shakes the walls
You can hear that devil sing You cut off the past
Buried him here
Deep in the belly of the mines
Blasted the wall sealed the tomb
Lived out those short days secure in your crime Many years have passed
But still we trudge on
So we will till the end of our days
Many have come and many have gone
But there's one who never strays from this place Son cover your ears
Lord how the blast will ring
And when that rumbling shakes the walls
You can hear that devil sing Son cover your ears
Lord how the blast will ring
And when that rumbling shakes the walls
You can hear that devil sing

Songwriters

Matthew Taylor Armstrong; Alexander Randolph Schrodt; Sarah Jackson Balliet; Adam Michael Turla Published by

RAM ISLAND SONGS (*SEE NOTES*) Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>