

City Boy

Poema

He wakes up, wakes up early today.
He doesn't feel like, feel like going through this routine day.
Oh oh, he runs to, runs to catch a spot on the subway. (On the subway.)
He gets to, gets to work this five fast day. When he sees her,
he's not just a typical city boy,
she makes him feel like so much more.
She helped him believe things are more than they seem,
and have some hope. His friends they, friends they laugh & say he's crazy.
Because he believes his life will really go somewhere. (Really go somewhere.)
Oh I know that, know that, sometimes life seems so unfair.
But some day, some day, I know he'll get there. 'Cause when he sees her,
he's not just a typical city boy,
she makes him feel like so much more.
She helped him believe things are more than they seem,
and have some hope. Yeah-eah.
Oh, yeah.
Again. He wakes up in the morning.
He finds he's all blown out.
And inside he hears a warning.
Can he be enough? Can people see that, see that, he's too good to be true?
And it's hard to believe after all that he's been through.
I've never seen someone so thrilled with love like you.
How can it be you, be you, can I see it too? Because to me he's, not just a typical city boy.
Because to me, he's so much more.
He helped me believe things are more than they seem,
and I have some hope.
Not just a typical city boy.
She makes him feel like so much more.
She helped him believe things are more than they seem,
and have some hope. Yeah-eah.
Oh, again.
Yeah-eah-eah-eah. Because you're so much more than me,
(Yeah)
so much more.
(Oh, again.)
You're so much more to me.
So much more,
(More than ...)

you're so much more to me.
