

Goodbye Again

UCLA ScatterTones

It's five o'clock this morning and the sun is on the rise
There's frosting on the window pane and sorrow in your eyes
    The stars are fading quietly, night is nearly gone
And so you turn away from me and tears begin to come
    And it's goodbye again, I'm sorry to be leaving you
    Goodbye again, as if you didn't know
    It's goodbye again and I wish you could tell me
    Why do we always fight when I have to go?
It seems a shame to leave you now, the days are soft and warm
    I long to lay me down again and hold you in my arms
    I long to kiss the tears away, give you back the smile
    Other voices beckon me, and for a little while
    It's goodbye again, I'm sorry to be leaving you
    Goodbye again, as if you didn't know
    It's goodbye again and I wish you could tell me
    Why do we always fight when I have to go?
I have to go and see some friends of mine, some that I don't know
    Some who aren't familiar with my name
    It's something that's inside of me not hard to understand
    It's anyone who listens to me sing
    If your hours are empty now, who am I to blame
You think if I were always here, our love would be the same
    As it is the time we have, is worth the time alone
    Lying by your side, the greatest peace I've ever known
    But it's goodbye again, I'm sorry to be leaving you
    Goodbye again, as if you didn't know
    It's goodbye again and I wish you could tell me
    Why do we always fight when I have to go?

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnlrics.com/>