

So Begins The Task

Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young

And so begins the task
I have dreaded the coming of for so long
I wait for the sun to remind
My body it needs resting
And I must learn to live without you now
I must learn to give only part some how
Camping on the edge of your city I wait
Hoping someday you might see beyond yourself
The shadows on the ceiling hard but not real
Like the bars that cage you within yourself

And I must learn to live without you now
I must learn to give only part some how
And I must learn to live without you now
As I cannot learn to give only part some how
All of these cages must and shall be set aside
They will only keep us from the knowing
Actors and stages now fall before the truth
And the love shared between us remains growing
And I must learn to live without you now
As I cannot learn to give only part some how
