

Worry All the Time

Denison Witmer

Lately I been waking to
The bluest stars that I once slept through
The morning hangs like open chords
That I fill in with my own thoughts and words I used to worry all the time
But I slowed down to live my life
To live my life now College campus and warmest grass
We sit and watch the people rush to class
When did we decide that life had to be
All fasts and cheques, that we lost mystery We used to worry all the time
But we slowed down to live our lives
To live our lives now
