

Fundamentally Yours

Stackridge

Finding time to write a line to someone that I knew
I remember slipping sideways falling in to view
Oh how can it be that words can't make you see

The hat stand that hangs in the hallway
Changing sides like morning brides
To satisfy your friends

You overstate your undercoat

To start a new trend
Flying home to work alone on
Building schemes and roads
I remembered holding horses
Catching summer colds

Oh how can it be that words can't make you see

The lampshade that lights up the landing
Changing sides like morning brides

To pacify my friends
You overpay your underdogs
Perhaps you pretend
Framing maps to fill the gaps
That fall across my room
I Remembered turning tables

Reaching for the moon
Oh how can it be that words can't make you see

The witness who waits in the wardrobe

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnlrics.com/>