

Each and Every One

Everything But the Girl

If you ever feel the time to drop me a loving line
Maybe you should just think twice, I don't wait around on your advice

You tell me I can go this far, but no more
Try to show me heaven and then slam the door
You offer shelter at a price, much too dear
And your kind of love's the kind that soon disappears

So don't brag how you have changed and everything's been rearranged
I thought all that was over and done but I still get the same from each and everyone

Being kind is just a way to keep me under your thumb
And I can cry because that's something we've always done
You tell me I'm free of the past now and all those lies
Then offer me the same thing in a different guise

You tell me I can go this far, but no more
Try to show me heaven and then slam the door
You offer shelter at a price, much too dear
And your kind of love's the kind that soon disappears
