

Radiance

Landscapes

Step from the shadows of solar darkness, like a ghost into the night, Besides a fear of death in life where no one understands their existence, beyond the surface of the sun and the contradicting difference of everything that's black on black In between the stars in view, I begin to feel the change in you as I ask the crumbling question am i a man of fading conscience After my final breath has gone and if the vale of tears dissolve I try grasp a deeper view as my mind concave's and I can't look back Stuck in the mist of nothing Beyond the face of change
It used to strangle me
It used to drag me beneath my feet Suspended over radiance
Into the depths of space
Do you remember me in vein
Do you remember losing sleep... again and again
Time crept beneath my weakened skin
I still wither away in silence
The burden dragged me to my knees though under an age repentance, bewildered sunken to embrace Under the closure of every night,
I whisper away and try to forget, everything I left behind Oh how the gods resemble me, as cut throat wire surround my lungs
I was struggling to breathe
