

Before the Rain

Duran Duran

A stormy summer is rolling closer
Lighting up this holy smoker
And if this drinking could ease the thinking
I toast to my home truth with this glass All rise, you promises broken
Call my lovers by their names
Lost hearts and words that are spoken to the wind
Which blows before the rain Little pin pricks and how my ears bleed
On the bomb ticks that is my heartbeat
In every life flash, in every car crash
I hear the silence waiting to fall All rise, you promises broken
Call my lovers by their names
Lost hearts and words that are spoken to the wind
Which blows before the rain For all I carry are murdered secrets
The price of my blue star eyed weakness
And so we travel and we unravel
Towards the place where all loose ends go All rise, you promises broken
Call my lovers by their names
Lost hearts and words that are spoken to the wind
Which blows before the rain
