Holding On

Lewis Watson

bite my tongue, you wouldn't hear me anyway hold my nerve, while i wait for the fires to fadei'm seeing every single word you don't say but i feel like i've seen it allhow come every time you ask me to stay you're halfway gone?if this is the easy way out, then why am i finding it hard as hell?
im wide awake, waiting for sleep to steal my doubts and everything we had that hurts, has come back to haunt us but ten times worseim holding on, so tight it hurts so why are we holding on?close my eyes am i slowly slipping away?
if i bide my time,
i'll get lost like a tear in the rainhow come every time you ask me to stay, you're halfway gone?if this is the easy way out, then why am i finding it hard as hell?
i'm wide awake, waiting for sleep to steal my doubtseverything we had that hurts, has come back to haunt us but ten times worse im holding on so tight, it hurtsso why are we holding on?
why are we holding on?
why are we holding on?
why are we holding on?
why are we holding on?if this is the easy way out, then why am i finding it hard as hell?
im holding on so tight it hurts, it's why i can't let you go
